Editor news:

If you will be so kind as to grant me little space in your valuable paper, I will write a few lines from here to let the readers know the commercial condition in Georgia.

We had a light frost the second of October which made us crawl under the quilts and hide from the ever vigilant little, well I mean large, mosquito. We have had some pretty cool days for a week.

All the talk through the summer was the boll weevil eating up all the cotton, and that there would not be a half crop made, which I really think was true. The first bales that were sold here in Dublin brought forty cents per pound, but it has been coming down every day since that time until it has reached twenty-one cents per pound, and it is predicted that it will go to fifteen cents. The price of cotton has demoralized everything, the farmers are having it ginned and hauling it back home or placing it in the warehouse and refusing to sell. Some of the tenants did not make enough to pay their rent and the land owners have been selling out the tenants for two weeks. They have a sale nearly every day in front of the courthouse selling out some tenant.

This is the only state that I have ever been in that they will go and sell out a tenant before he has had time to market his crop for his rent. They even sell out his household furniture, stock, farming implements, and everything clean that they can find. I have seen them sell furniture, as well as the mules and other stock, leaving the man without anything. The banks are not loaning any money on the cotton much. Very few farmers will raise anything but cotton, and that is raised by the negroes and the man will come to town in his automobile and park his car along the curbing and sit or a great many times he is asleep in his car for the whole day. Then he will tell you what my Nigger is cultivating for me.

If there is not a reaction in the prices of cotton I don't know what will become of the South. Everything that you have to buy is very high and no money in circulation.

I notice from reading the Adair County News that generally speaking the crops are pretty fair in that section of Kentucky, also that Adair County took some good premiums on tobacco at the fair at Louisville.

The cane chewing convention is about to open down here. The farmers are bringing in their cane and selling it at the stores by the wagon loads at seven cents per stalk and then the merchants sell it to the people to chew at ten cents per stalk. Every man, women, and child has a stalk of cane chewing on it. I have a young lady teacher, by the name of Miss Katherine Jones of Center Kentucky that has been initiated as a royal member of the cane chewing club. I suspect that some of my Adair county friends will think that all of this is bosh, but they will only have to make a trip South to be convinced.

I shall never forget the first trip that I made to Georgia

Wtaten Farm,

Known as Mrs. Kate Spalding Farm, 1 1/2 Miles from Lebanon on Springfield Pike,

At Public Auction To High Dollar

On this 161 acres there is a fairly good tenant house and good outbuildings. We recently sold to Mr. Sam Burdette, of Columbia, 220 acres of this farm at around $200 per acre. Knowing the farm as we do we frankly and unmistakably desire to state that the best portion of the farm is yet owned by Mr. Wathen, and it will be sold on the above named date. Mr. Wathen and his brother-in-law from Owensboro have recently bought a big boundary of timber which they intend to develop and it is a four-year job to do so. Therefore he has absolutely put this land in our hands to sell without reserve or by-bid. The greater portion of it is in grass and timber. Remember, it is the best part of the Mrs. Kate Spalding farm. If Mr. Wathen had not made the big timber deal this land would not be offered for sale because he knows values when he sees them. But, after taking the two propositions under serious consideration, he decided to accept the timber deal and Marion county thereby loses temporarily a valuable citizen.

We maintain free automobiles for your convenience.

Terms easy and made known on day of sale.

Any one interested in this land will see Mr. Wathen at the farm or the about 1911 or there about, and I had a cousin by the name of Robert Willis that was reared near Zion Church in the vicinity of Joppa, Adair County that was teaching in Bullock County Georgia, and I made him a visit, getting there about an hour after dark. When I went into his room and took him by surprise he had about four feet of a cane stalk and the most of it was in his mouth, he began to try to talk and spit cane pulp all over the room. But he was not satisfied until they got me to try chewing the cane, which I enjoyed for awhile with them.
